

Is Political Correctness the Thief of Freedom?

By Brittany A. Macias

“Political correctness has asphyxiated the United States.” - Nick Adams, F.L.A.G.

In a recent presentation at Ignite the Fire in Kerrville, TX, Australian native, Nick Adams, revealed his vision for the restoration of our great nation. He declared that it is not only in the interest of Americans that the United States be preserved, but it is in the interest of every person, in every nation, of every persuasion that America remain as “strong and as full of leadership as is conceivable.”

Adams, a self-proclaimed “Australian by birth, Texan by appointment, American by choice,” credits American exceptionalism, by way of a doctor in Sydney, for his life. Adams was diagnosed with stage-four cancer at the age of 16 months by an American completing a brief stint practicing medicine in Australia. The diagnosis ultimately saved young Adams’ life and ignited his passion for American greatness.

In response to his experience with one American, and a lifetime of studying the United States, Adams has not only chosen to live in our nation, he has chosen to join the fight for its preservation. Adams and his team of heavy-hitters have begun the launch of a U.S. 501(c)(3)—F.L.A.G., the Foundation for Liberty and American Greatness—solely purposed for the combating of Anti-Americanism.

In his presentation at Ignite the Fire, Adams honed in on the importance of ‘crushing political correctness’—also the subtitle to his new book: Retaking America—and its hand in the demise of the most “daring and improbable experiment of humanity” that is the United States of America.

According to Adams, political correctness is the leading cause of America’s current state and the acceptance of political correctness halts the implementation of solutions before they begin. Also aptly declared by Adams, political correctness “seeks to remove three things: individualism, identity, and confidence” from the American people as it has done in Europe.

Adams' organization, The Foundation for Liberty and American Greatness (F.L.A.G), is dedicated to studying and understanding the enemy—those who wish to indoctrinate America with political correctness and those who are Anti-American. FLAG is dedicated to combating domestic enemies and ensuring equal representation in the areas where they hide, working to establish a presence in schools, newsrooms, government, the arts—all places of innermost society.

“F.L.A.G. is not a think tank, F.L.A.G. is a battle tank.” - Nick Adams

Millions of foreigners immigrate to the United States every year for a taste of freedom, for a chance to be who they're designed to be. This response to our Constitutional America is something Adams referred to as the “indispensability of America...you can come here with nothing and leave with everything.” It is for this exact reason that Adams joined the many others who immigrate here and wishes to see a “conservative revolution.” F.L.A.G.'s plan is to put a stop to the “totalitarian ideology that produces a choking conformity and an intellectual tyranny.” He explains that this can be done, in part, by implementing the tactics of the left against them to combat Anti-Americanism, reduce a society victimhood, and take back the culture for America.

“These colors will not run. You can lie about us, you can deface us... but we are not going to lie superiorly on our backs and take it. We are going to fight!”

I could not have said it any better myself, Mr. Adams.

Until next time....
